

COMBINED SOCIETY ORIENTATION PROGRAM

30th & 31st July 2026

The Internal Quality Assurance Cell (IQAC) organized a Combined Society Orientation Program for the newly admitted students on 30th and 31st July. The program was organized with the objective of familiarizing freshers with the diverse range of societies functioning in the college and providing them with an understanding of the opportunities available beyond the academic curriculum. The two-day program brought together various societies on a common platform and provided freshers with an opportunity to learn about their objectives, activities, initiatives and areas of engagement. The orientation was designed to be informative, interactive and engaging, enabling students to gain a better understanding of the vibrant society culture of the college.

The first day, held on 30th July, was dedicated to the Academic and Professional Societies. Representatives of the respective societies introduced their societies to the freshers through PowerPoint presentations. The presentations covered the objectives, functioning, activities and major initiatives of the societies, along with the opportunities available for students to participate and contribute. The societies presented their information in an engaging manner, ensuring that the session remained interactive and accessible to the freshers. This helped students gain an overview of the various academic and professional platforms available within the college and enabled them to identify societies that aligned with their interests and aspirations.

The second day, held on 31st July, focused on the Cultural and Social Service Societies. The session incorporated society introductions along with various performances and interactive activities to provide the freshers with a more engaging experience. Raunquan presented a Gidda performance, SGGSBT showcased Bhangra, and UBA presented a Nukkad Natak, highlighting the cultural and social dimensions of student life. iVogue also conducted a ramp walk, adding an interactive and entertaining element to the program. Alongside these performances, representatives of the participating cultural and social service societies introduced their respective societies, highlighting their activities, initiatives and opportunities for student participation. The combination of presentations, performances and interactive elements created an energetic and engaging environment for the freshers.

The Combined Society Orientation Program successfully served its purpose of introducing freshers to the wide spectrum of societies operating in the college. By bringing academic, professional, cultural, and social service societies together, the program provided students with a comprehensive overview of the opportunities available to them. The inclusion of cultural performances, Nukkad Natak, ramp walk and engaging society presentations made the orientation both informative and participatory. The program encouraged freshers to explore their interests, actively participate in co-curricular activities and become an integral part of the college community. Overall, the initiative reflected IQAC's efforts towards facilitating a well-rounded and engaging orientation experience for the newly admitted students.
